

How to apply items to an access switch

AI Overview

Applying items to a switch depends on whether you mean a Microsoft Access switchboard or a network access switch; both require specific steps to configure commands or rules.

Microsoft Access Switchboard

To add items (commands) to a switchboard in Microsoft Access: Open Switchboard Manager: If not visible, add it to the Quick Access Toolbar via Access Options → More Commands → All Commands → Switchboard Manager → Add → OK . Create or Select a Switchboard: Click Switchboard Manager, choose to create a new switchboard or select an existing one. Add Items: Click New to add a command button. Specify: Text: The label displayed on the button. Command: The action it performs (e.g., open a form, report, or another switchboard). Organize Navigation: For multiple switchboards, ensure each secondary switchboard has a button to return to the Main Switchboard . Save Changes: Close the Switchboard Manager. The new items now appear as buttons on the switchboard form . This allows users to navigate your database efficiently, with each button performing a specific task.

Network Access Switch (Cisco Example)

To apply items such as Access Control Lists (ACLs) or VLAN configurations to a network switch:

Connect to the Switch: Use a console cable and a terminal program like PuTTY to access the CLI . Enter Privileged EXEC Mode: Type enable and enter the password. Configure ACLs: Create an ACL with rules specifying permit or deny conditions for traffic based on source/destination IP, protocol, or port . Example: ip access-list extended BLOCK_HTTP followed by deny tcp any any eq 80. Apply ACL to Interface or VLAN: Enter interface configuration mode: interface GigabitEthernet0/1. Apply ACL: ip access-group BLOCK_HTTP in. Save Configuration: Use write memory or copy running-config startup-config to persist changes .

ACLs and VLAN assignments control traffic flow and access permissions, ensuring network security and proper segmentation.
