

Price of Home Electrical Distribution Boxes in Singapore

AI Overview

In Singapore, replacing or installing a home electrical distribution box (DB box) typically costs between S$350 and S$1,500, depending on property type and installation complexity.

Cost by Property Type

- HDB Flats: S$350–S$480 for a standard DB box replacement.
- Condominiums: S$650–S$800, reflecting higher-end materials and installation requirements.
- Landed Properties: S$950–S$1,500, due to larger electrical loads and more complex wiring.

Factors Affecting Cost

- Type of DB Box: Basic boxes are cheaper, while advanced models with surge protection or smart monitoring increase the price.
- Installation Complexity: Older properties or those requiring rewiring, wall modifications, or additional circuits may incur higher labor costs.
- Labor and Safety Checks: Professional installation by EMA-licensed electricians ensures compliance with safety standards, which can affect pricing.
- Additional Services: Upgrades, rewiring, or emergency installations outside normal hours can increase the total cost.
- Brand and Quality: Approved brands like Honeywell, Legrand, Hager, or Schneider Electric may cost more but offer better long-term reliability.

Summary

For a typical HDB flat, homeowners can expect to pay around S$350–S$480 for a standard DB box replacement, while condos and landed homes will generally cost more due to higher capacity requirements and installation complexity. Upgrading to advanced DB boxes or including rewiring services can further increase the cost, so it is recommended to obtain a detailed quote from a licensed electrician to plan your budget accurately.
